Working With a Commercial Agent The Agency Relationship

Who's working for you?

- It is important that you understand who the Commercial Agent is working for. For example, both the seller and the buyer may have their own agent which means they each have a Commercial Agent who is working for them
- Or, some buyers choose to contact the seller's agent directly. Under this arrangement, the Commercial Agent is working for the seller, and must do what is best for the seller, but may provide many valuable customer services to the buyer.
- A Commercial Agent working with a buyer may even be a "sub-agent" of the seller. Under sub-agency, both the listing brokerage and the co-operating brokerage must do what is best for the seller even though the sub-agent may provide many valuable customer services to the buyer.
- If the brokerage represents both the seller and the buyer, this is limited dual agency.

In real estate, there are different possible forms of agency relationships:

1. Seller's Agency

- When a real estate brokerage represents a seller, it must do what is best for the seller of a property.
- A written contract, called a listing agreement, creates an agency relationship between the seller and the brokerage and establishes seller representation. It also explains services the brokerage will provide, establishes a fee arrangement for the Commercial Agent services and specifies what obligations a seller may have.
- A seller's agent must tell the seller anything known about a buyer. For instance, if a seller's agent knows a buyer is willing to offer more for a property, that information must be shared with the seller.
- Confidences a seller shares with a seller's agent must be kept confidential from potential buyers and others
- Although confidential information about the seller cannot be discussed, a buyer working with a seller's agent can expect fair and honest service from the seller's agent and disclosure of pertinent information about the property.

2. Buyers Agency

- A real estate brokerage representing a buyer must do what is best for the buyer.
- A written contract, called a buyer representation agreement, creates an agency relationship between the buyer and the brokerage, and establishes buyer representation. It also explains services the brokerage will provide, establishes a fee arrangement for the Commercial Agent's services and specifies what obligations a buyer may have.
- Typically, buyers will be obliged to work exclusively with that brokerage for a period of time.
- Confidences a buyer shares with the buyer's agent must be kept confidential.
- Although confidential information about the buyer cannot be disclosed, a seller working with a buyer's agent can expect to be treated fairly and honestly.

3. Limited Dual Agency

- Occasionally a real estate brokerage will represent both the buyer and the seller. The buyer and seller must consent to this arrangement in writing. Under this limited dual agency arrangement, the brokerage must do what is best for both the buyer and the seller.

- Since the brokerage's loyalty is divided between the buyer and the seller who have conflicting interests, it is absolutely essential that a limited dual agency relationship be properly documented. Representation agreements specifically describe the rights and duties of everyone involved and any limitations to those rights and duties.

4. Customer Service

- A real estate brokerage may provide services to buyers and sellers without creating buyer or seller representation. This is called "customer service."
- Under this arrangement, the brokerage can provide many valuable services in a fair and honest manner. This relationship can be set out in a buyer or seller customer service agreement
- Real estate negotiations are often complex and a brokerage may be providing representation and/or customer service to more than one seller or buyer. The brokerage will disclose these relationships to each buyer and seller.

Code of Ethics

- Commercial Agents believe it is important that the people they work with understand their agency relationship. That's why requirements and obligations for representation and customer service are included in a Code of Ethics which is administered by the Saskatchewan Real Estate Commission.
- The Code requires Commercial Agents to disclose in writing the nature of the services they are providing, and encourages Commercial Agents to obtain written acknowledgement of that disclosure. The Code also requires Commercial Agents to submit written representation agreements for any sellers or buyers they are representing.
