COQUITLAM INDUSTRIAL MARKET

5 YEAR SNAPSHOT

Other IntraUrban projects in Greater Vancouver have proven to be outstanding investments.

IntraUrban Brentwood, Burnaby

IntraUrban Crossroads, Surrey

Being a business owner is never easy, but owning your own space can make it easier. Ownership can be a significant business advantage: by eliminating your exposure to rising lease rates; by giving you much-needed predictability about your long-term costs; and by giving you the control over how you grow and expand.

Demand for industrial space is growing. That means opportunity.

The residential real estate market continues to command headlines throughout Greater Vancouver, but the investment case for industrial property may be even stronger. Exponentially increasing demand and an extraordinarily constrained land base provides an exceptional long-term investment opportunity.

Exceptional space makes for an exceptional opportunity.

The rapid growth of the Tri-Cities area presents savvy business owners and investors with a rare and exciting opportunity. As prime industrial land becomes more scarce, those who own modern industrial space located along high-visibility transit corridors are well positioned to see the value of their space increase over time.

INTRAUrBAN: REDEFINING “INDUSTRIAL”.

As the developer behind IntraUrban projects, PC Urban has continued to redefine the limits of industrial and commercial property, providing small- and medium-sized businesses with flexible, premium-quality business space that’s almost too good to be industrial.

The company has extensive experience developing successful projects throughout Greater Vancouver, Southern Vancouver Island and the Okanagan. The original IntraUrban Business Park located at 8811 Laurel Street in Vancouver sold out before completion. Other notable projects include Brentwood located at 5495 Regent Street near The Amazing Brentwood in Burnaby, Crossroads at Highway 10 in Surrey, and Rivershore located at 11111 Twigg Place in Richmond.

Taken together, these projects are dramatic examples of the company’s expertise in building premium-quality business space in fast-growing, strategically-located neighbourhoods made for your ownership success.
