AEROTROPOLIS

The concept of an 'Aerotropolis' centers around a land use planning strategy that capitalizes on the economic opportunities created by major airports and leverages existing businesses to enhance tourism, encourage job growth, and diversify the economy. The Alberta Aerotropolis study area falls under the jurisdictions of the City of Leduc and Leduc County, and the land surrounding Edmonton International Airport is mainly zoned for employment, industrial uses, and traditional agriculture. The Alberta Aerotropolis has the potential to accommodate eight economic clusters, including energy, aerospace and aviation, life sciences, transportation, logistics and distribution, education, advanced manufacturing, and agri-business. These clusters provide a diverse mix of sectors that are essential for the success of the Alberta Aerotropolis.
